I am pleased to know that scientific forum “International Association of General Dentistry” has been established. Such associations across the borders will give the much needed global insight in our field. I am sure this forum will also provide a platform for integration of all specialties, which is the need of the hour. The objectives are well-defined and encouraging. Active involvement from the professionals will take Dentistry into the next generation.

Education is a life long learning process. Education empowers the individual. It makes the learner curious and discerning. The universities and educational institutions impart education. The curriculum, subjects gives knowledge. In today’s scenario this is just not sufficient. There is always a scope for improvement. It is a fast changing world with newer technologies and inventions. Vast and rapid change results in lack of knowledge in applying the advancements in daily practice. Research should be applied to practice, benefitting the patients. Students, graduates, postgraduates, practitioners all need to update their knowledge. To implement all these, scientific associations like IAGD are vital. In such a fast changing world, IAGD have an important role to play. I am confident about their ability and standards.

This IAGD has renowned intellectuals, academicians, practitioners, and students in their forum. This will give opportunity for all to participate and share. The scientific journal of the association will aid in publishing the articles. Students can interact with pioneers and get exposed in their early learning career. It will add new dimension and perspective to their studies. Awards and fellowship will always encourage the member associates.

To end I am sure this association will bridge the gap between the basics and advancements and provide opportunity to all. Let us change the world without changing the values for the welfare of the patients. I wish everyone the very best.
